

U.S. SALES RESTRICTIONS ON FLAVORED TOBACCO PRODUCTS

This document provides select examples of U.S. states, cities, and counties¹ that restrict the sale of flavored tobacco products. For local jurisdictions, it focuses on those with a population over 75,000. The Public Health Law Center includes the following best practices in its model tobacco flavor restrictions policies: (1) covering the entire jurisdiction, (2) prohibiting menthol, (3) restricting flavors in all tobacco products, and (4) not including exemptions for certain retailers.

The first chart organizes jurisdictions based on how they address these four best practices.

The second chart organizes the jurisdictions by state, capturing variations among flavor restrictions in each of these four areas. The chart also provides links to each jurisdiction's laws and summarizes relevant legal challenges.

A state or local government considering whether to adapt any language from the following policies should take care to ensure that the language is appropriate, practical, and legal for its jurisdiction. Please note that the Public Health Law Center does not endorse or recommend any of the following policies. We have included these examples to illustrate how various jurisdictions regulate the sale of flavored tobacco products and related electronic nicotine delivery devices.

This chart is not comprehensive. Feel free to contact the Public Health Law Center for more information about flavored tobacco restrictions where you live.
